

When a defendant files a claim for judgment of acquittal, the court must grant the judgment if the evidence is so weak that no reasonable juror could find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

The court must grant the judgment if the evidence is so weak that no reasonable juror could find the defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Title 5, Chapter 5.1, Section 4600, effective July 1, 2009, Uniform Complaint Procedure.

